

Coronial inquiries

Acting for many providers, O'Loughlins Lawyers has rare insight into the current and emerging issues impacting the aged care and retirement living sectors. Applied in all specific matters in which we are retained, this insight is now accessible via a range of tailored training sessions.

Coronial inquiries

The prospect of a coronial inquiry fills staff with dread. Understandably. But how much is it fear of the unknown?

This training looks at incident management and response with the prospect of a coronial inquiry in mind. We address the role of documentation, witness preparation and support and the coronial hearing process.

We also review the findings of a range of coronial inquests in the aged care sector around Australia, and reflect upon the issues arising in those inquests and key recommendations made by the coroners in each case.

The session is run by Peter Myhill, a Partner in our Health, Aged Care and Retirement Living team. The session also includes a presentation by Stephen White, a Partner in our litigation team, who has guided many of our clients through coronial inquests and associated issues, including police requests during preliminary investigations and preparation of witness statements.

Session costs

3 hour program: $1,500 plus GST
